Beacon Summer Scare August 12-13

By Kristine Coulter

The Beacon Summer Scare will be held August 12 and 13 at 413 Main St. in Beacon. It is in the Pvt. William B. Wilson VFW Post 666 building.

One of the organizers is Sean McCue, from Epic Robo Spider, a Comic and Collectibles store in Highland Falls. Along with McCue organizing the event is Mike Burged from Story Screen Presents in Beacon.

"We have planned and hosted many Comic, Toy shows and vendor events at the VFW in Beacon these past few years. Our love for horror movies and all things Halloween prompted us to put together The Beacon Summer Scare. By August many people are looking forward to Halloween, especially the Creepy-centric bunch. The Summer Scare is a fun way for people to satiate their longing for the Halloween Holiday, an inexpensive way to take the family to the movies," McCue said via email.

On August 12, it is a double-feature movie event. Admission is $3 each, kids 16 & under are free.

Doors open at 4 p.m. with "Monster Squad" starting at 6 p.m. and "Phantasm" at 8 p.m.

"They are providing the pop up theater," said McCue of Story Screen Presents. "Being obvious movie lovers, they thought hard on possible movies for this event. Something fun and not too scary for the first film, kid friendly. Who doesn't like a friendly Frankenstein Monster? And something a little more cult classic and campy for the second. With that being said the selections are "Monster Squad" and "Phantasm."

On August 13, doors open noon - 6 p.m. with Beacon Summer Scare vendor market 413 Main St. in Beacon. Admission is $3 each, children 16 and under are free. The vendor market is brought by the Beacon Toy & Comic Book Show.

"The vendor sign-ups have just opened. So far, we have seven vendors for the movie night and that is sold out. There are 10 vendors signed up for Sunday so far, most securing multiple tables to facilitate all their awesome stuff. In past shows we've had on average 22 vendors and 31 tables indoors and a few tent spaces outside," explained McCue.

We've heard from bands that they like this venue and the stage; one musician said she came to concerts at Schlathaus when she was a child and now, she is playing there," said Donna Lenhart, an assistant with the Town of Wappinger Recreation Department.

"Our attendees have commented that we offer a good selection of music. We do think these concerts are great, mid-week breaks from stress and hectic everyday life by offering folks the opportunity to enjoy free music under the stars," Lenhart commented.

Hyde Park hiker and dog scale the heights together

By Stacey vandenThoorn

Meet Topo, the 6-year-old German Shorthaired Pointer mix, although his true breeding background is not quite known as he was adopted at around a year old by his dog mom and avid hiker Diane Linenbroker of Hyde Park. A search result on Petfinder was the first introduction for Diane to her soon-to-be hiking companion. The pair was ultimately brought together by Dog Star Rescue of Connecticut who transported Topo, among other stray pups, from North Carolina to Hartford, Conn., adoption.

What would inspire someone to take on hiking the Catskills with a dog, you ask? For Diane it was a shift in perspective that led her to the trail (pun intended!).

"Until about 10 years ago, I hiked sporadically, and would not have characterized myself as a hiker. After a perspective shift took me away from marathon training and into doing long hikes, I got hooked hiking the Catskill high peaks and I became a dedicated hiker and backpacker," Diane said. "My goal was always to

He said, "Last year our attendance was down, but it was very much hit or miss. Some concerts were sparsely attended while others had big crowds."

He noted, "In my opinion there were several variables. Some performers brought their own fans with them and that makes for a fun crowd with people dancing etc."

Tyliczszak continued, "Then there is scheduling/timing. With multiple events all summer it's tough to find a sweet spot where you're not conflicting on dates and timing were people and available. More people commute these days. We plan the hike with whatever dog I adopted, so I looked for an athletic dog who would do well adventuring on the trails with me. I hit the jackpot with Topo, since his build, endurance, temperament, and intelligence are all perfect for hiking. He loves it! The training was the hard part, but well worth the effort."

Training Topo took more than a year and, at times, proved to be a long and frustrating road for Diane.

"As a pointer mix, Topo's prey instinct was very high, and I struggled to train him to walk on a leash," she said. "My vet recommended a dog behaviorist who trained hunting breeds and taught me how to work with Topo to establish structure in our relationship, helping Topo to understand that I was the provider and his place in the pack required him to behave a certain way. It was very frustrating at times but I never gave up on him (or on myself). It took a lot of work, a lot of time, and about all the patience I had, but finally it just clicked for Topo. From there, I was able to fine tune his training. Now my friends say that Topo and I have a language all our own!"

Diane and Topo both thoroughly enjoy wilderness areas and mostly hike in the Catskills. Topo has a summit tally of almost 700 Catskill high peaks (including repeated summits of the 33 high peaks over 3,500 feet and designated substitutes for two peaks closed to public access). He is the first known canine finisher of "The Grid," as he has hiked each of the high peaks in every month of the year, and is near completing a second Grid. He has also completed the Catskills All Trails Challenge, hiking the full length of every trail in Catskill Park, and is well on his way to finishing a second round.

Topo has earned 25 hiking patches from various hiking clubs; and his most recent hike with Diane involved nine 4,000 footers in the White Mountains of New Hampshire.

On non-hiking days Diane walks Topo six to eight miles on the Hyde Park Trails.

"He is no weekend warrior!" said Diane. "I am hoping to take Topo on a few multi-day backpacking trips, including hiking the Cranberry Lake 50 in the Adirondacks."

Diane's main goals for Topo are to keep him happy and healthy so he can keep adventuring with her for many years to come. When planning hikes, Diane seriously considers "time on paws" more than miles or elevation gain, since Topo tends to be in almost non-stop motion for the entire hike. Planning and preparation is critical and depends largely on weather (including temperature, humidity, wind), trail conditions and whether there are rock scrambles and other more difficult terrain that will tax his body more. Topo has completed hikes up to 10 hours long and close to 20 trail miles in a day, but typically their hikes generally range from 4 to 7 hours per day depending on weather, terrain and overall conditions.

When not hiking, Topo is quite a snugly pup with a super-sweet temperament and loves to cuddle on the couch, play with other dogs, and explore. Diane and her friends enjoy hiking with Topo because he is not an attention-seeker. He is a pup that is happy to spend time doing lots of exploring, spending time with his dog mom, and of course relaxing with a full belly after a fun day in the outdoors.

Due to his numerous adventures and excursions, Topo has become quite the local celebrity. He has become known by many hikers in the Catskills and is often recognized on trails. According to Diane, Topo gets many compliments on his behavior, demeanor, and trail etiquette and has been the subject of many selfies posted on social media by other hikers.

Taking a dog hiking is no light matter. Diane encourages anyone considering hiking with a dog to realize the great responsibility involved in ensuring the safety of all when it comes to hiking.

"Bringing a dog into a wilderness area is a great responsibility," she said. "When I hike, Topo is my first priority. Thus, my attention must always be partly on him. When I am chatting with hiking companions or taking photos, part of my focus must always be on Topo. Every dog is different, and I had to learn what Topo was capable of and allow him to build confidence and endurance. I started Topo on easy trails and worked up to longer hikes and trails that included rock scrambles."

Since weather is also an important consideration when hiking, in the summer, Diane and Topo hike early in the morning, keeping the hikes short unless it is a very cool day, and she always carries more water than she thinks he will need. Considerations of temperature and humidity also play a large role in planning and preparation as well as tick prevention.

"I carry a huge first aid kit and other supplies including a carry-out harness in case of a non-weight bearing injury (he is 55 pounds) and sled dog booties in case of a paw injury. I also have gear necessary to spend a night in the woods in case of an emergency, in addition to my own essentials and emergency gear," said Diane. "My pack is always big and heavy! I often hike without another human companion, so I let a friend know where I am going and send my track via a Garmin inReach, which is also an SOS device."

When it comes to hiking etiquette, Diane holds herself and Topo at a very high level.

"In wilderness areas on state land in the Catskills, dogs must be under voice control if off-leash, which is a high bar that I do not take lightly. I consider it a great responsibility to allow a dog off-leash and I have a very high level of expectation for Topo," said Diane. "A good trail dog waits for my OK before going up to a person or another dog and he cannot chase wildlife or go out of my sight. If a squirrel runs down a tree right in front of him (which happens more frequently than one might think), I need to be able to call him away from it. It took a tremendous amount of work for both of us to get to this point, especially since I was working with a young adult dog who had been a starving stray. I did not allow Topo off-leash until I was confident in his training. I also consider it essential to check in with other hikers before allowing Topo to approach other humans or other dogs."

Another essential factor of hiking, whether with a dog or not, is to remain constantly aware of your surroundings.

"My attention is always on my surroundings and on Topo. I am constantly scanning and listening for other humans or dogs, wildlife, or hazards in order to react immediately if necessary," said Diane. "As a pointer, Topo is great at spotting wildlife, and he will stop and watch animals. I have seen bears, foxes, and fisher cats I would not have seen otherwise. Topo knows not to chase, and he just watches, which allows me to appreciate the wildlife as well."

When asked about encountering any harrowing/hazardous experiences, Diane spoke of a time when the pair were hiking along the Neversink and a huge bear emerged from behind a downed tree right in front of them.

"Topo was about 15 feet from the bear and I was about 15 feet behind Topo. Topo responded to me immediately and came right to my side. The bear was as scared as I was and took off, but the situation got my heart pounding!" said Diane. "We also once came upon a mama bear with a cub, which can be a very dangerous situation. Topo behaved perfectly, sitting down and watching as the cub climbed a tree and the mom took off down the trail. We immediately retreated and went another way."

One of Diane and Topo's most memorable hiking events occurred when they were hiking on Balsam Mountain in the Catskills last Fall and Topo spotted a fisher (cat) about 150 feet away.

"Topo behaved perfectly, sitting completely still on a large boulder to watch. We watched the fisher go about her business of digging up grubs for about 10 minutes. The fisher never appeared to know we were there. A memorable experience watching an often elusive animal," said Diane.

Advice for novice owners who want to hike with their dog:

- Check with your vet to see if they have any recommendations for your specific dog and to make sure your dog is up to date on tick prevention and all vaccinations needed for an adventure dog.

- A blaze orange doggy vest is essential during any hunting season (not just deer season), and it is important to know when the various hunting seasons are so you can plan hikes accordingly.

- It is important to learn how your dog will react to gunshots or other loud noises.

- Carry more than enough water for you and your dog.

- Be prepared for injuries with a first aid kit and a carry-out harness if the dog is too big to otherwise carry.

- Be very aware and conscious of the weather. Depending on the type of dog, toleration to different types of weather will vary. Err on the side of caution - it is never worth putting a dog or yourself at risk.

Most importantly, Diane urges dog owners to learn what their dog likes and is capable of. She recommends starting out with hikes that are on easy terrain and can be shortened if necessary. It is important also to understand that not all dogs are built for all hikes, and not all dogs enjoy hiking. To ensure a fun hike for both dog and human alike, plan properly and stay safe!

Hudson Valley uses hitting power to trounce Crawdads

By Rich Thomaselli

The Hudson Valley Renegades got back to doing what they do best – hitting the baseball.

Hudson Valley scored a total of 51 runs in winning four games against the Hickory, NC Crawdads last week. The team set the tone right away on Tuesday night with a 16-6 victory.

On Wednesday, it was hitting and pitching as the team won 7-0. Hudson Valley hit four home runs in the game. Spencer Henson got the Renegades on the board with a solo home run off Nick Lockhart in the top of the second. The blast was Henson's 11th of the season, a new career high. In the top of the fourth, Agustin Ramirez ripped a lead-off homer to left off Lockhart (1-1) to give the Renegades a 2-0 advantage. That was all the Renegades would need as Brendan Beck worked in and out of trouble on Wednesday, allowing six hits across 3.1 innings of work, but stranded five runners on base to keep the Crawdads off the scoreboard. After he left, Luis Velasquez (1-1) threw 3.2 perfect innings of relief, at one point combining with Beck to retire 13 consecutive batters.

On Thursday, the Renegades lost a nail biter, 6-5. The game ended in unusual fashion with a walk-off strikeout. You read that correctly. Frainyer Chavez led off the bottom of the ninth with a double off Clay Aguilar, and pinch-runner Jayce Easley advanced to third on a sacrifice bunt by Cooper Johnson. The next batter, Keyber Rodriguez, struck out on a ball in the dirt, and when Ramirez threw down to first to complete the strikeout, Easley broke for the plate and scored ahead of the return throw to give Hickory a 6-5 win on a walk-off strikeout.

On Friday, it was an 11-2 victory. Hudson Valley hit four more home runs in the game. Aldenis Sanchez hit an opposite-field two-run home run in the first inning. Two batters later, Marcos Cabrera ripped a line drive homer to left to give Hudson Valley a 3-0 lead.

8-6 in five innings at L.P. Frans Stadium. Drew Thorpe, who led Hudson Valley with a 10-1 record coming into the game, gave up four runs in the first inning. Hudson Valley was actually down 6-0 before mounting a comeback. The Renegades started their comeback in the top of the fourth, striking for three runs to halve the deficit to 6-3. After Larson Kindreich walked Anthony Garcia and Antonio Gomez, Eduardo Torrealba drove them both in with a two-run single off Jackson Kelley. Two batters later, Ben Cowles drove in Torrealba with a double to right.

On Sunday, Henson had another huge day at the plate and five pitchers combined for a four-hit shutout for a 6-0 win over the Crawdads. The Renegades took the lead in the top of the first with a two-out rally against Winston Santos. Agustin Ramirez singled and Christopher Familia followed with a walk. Spencer Henson drove the first pitch he saw down the left field line for a double to plate Ramirez and give the Renegades a 1-0 lead.

Grant Richardson tacked on a run in the top of the second with a solo home run to center, and Alexander Vargas ripped a home run off the right field foul pole leading off the top of the third. After Santos was pulled with two outs in the third, Henson greeted Gavin Collyer with a solo home run to left to extend the lead to 4-0.

The Renegades are on the road this week for six games against the Wilmington BlueRocks.

For Zolzer, it's all about 'Fun at the ballpark'

By Rich Thomaselli

Even after all these years, Rick Zolzer still has fun at the ballpark.

"Every day is different," he said. "You never know what you're going to see or what the day is going to bring."

And you never know what Zolzer is going to do or say. Remember, this is the same man who was thrown out of a game against the Vermont Expos for a remark over the public address system. That was more than 20 years ago and the incident was even written up in Sports Illustrated magazine.

He has been with the Renegades since they moved here in 1994 from Erie, PA. With the exception of one year, he has been the public address announcer since then. He was formerly part of the WPDH warning radio show and heavily advocated for minor league baseball in the area.

When then-management heard him on the radio, they asked him if he wanted to be the PA announcer. Zolzer is now a vice-president with the franchise, and in many respects is the face and voice of the team. He still loves to do the public address announcing but in almost three decades with the franchise, he has toned down his craziness quite a bit.

"I still say I am like Peter Pan," he said. "I'm the kid who never grew up."

Zolzer's outgoing personality and affinity for sports serve him well. A local product who graduated from John Jay High School, he worked at the 1980 Winter Olympics in Lake Placid as a college student, coached high school football and then coached for Marist College football. He has been a fixture on local radio for decades and still owns his own successful DJ business and works several weddings, proms and other occasions per week.

"Because of everything that he has done and because of who he is, Rick is the most identifiable person with the franchise," said former general manager Steve Gliner, who was part of the original management that hired Zolzer almost three decades ago.

Indeed, that is his voice on the team voicemail as well as radio and television commercials.

"I guess you could say I'm ubiquitous, yes," he said, "but how many people get to come to the ballpark as their office everyday?"

TYSON'S TIDBITS!

Tackling ever-changing issues and marveling at great player prospects

Each week writer Rich Thomaselli and Hudson Valley General Manager Tyson Jeffers discuss the Renegades in particular and minor league baseball in general.

What's a typical day like for you at the office?

(laughs) It changes everyday. I'll go into the day with a list of things that I have to tackle, but you never know when it gets all blown up like a flight being canceled to North Carolina. That actually happened this past Monday with our flight down to Hickory. Priorities change. You never know what is going to happen and next thing you know you're on the phone trying to change 20-plus things. It was not a fun Monday. It was a stressful day, but those things come up. And that's why you have to prioritize and re-prioritize everything.

We're into August. Has the season gone by quickly for you?

Quickly. It's gone by in the blink of an eye. Even our staff has said the same thing, like we can't believe it's August already. It seems like that happens every year. You get into the rhythm of things and next thing you know, it's almost over. Sure, it feels like it's dragging, but for the most part, from April to now, it feels like it has flown by.

What's it like having a guy like Drew Thorpe on the roster? He's like a generational talent with a start he has had.

We are very glad he's still with us, because he's definitely a great story to tell to our fans. He is someone who has a chance to move on and have a great future. We're a little surprised he hasn't been moved up yet after the great run he's been on. He's been performing unbelievably well, and the national media and the baseball world have noticed.

Governor Hochul announces $10 Million in funding available in Round Four of $58 Million Buildings of Excellence Competition

Governor Kathy Hochul has announced $10 million in funding is now available under Round Four of the $58 million Buildings of Excellence Competition, which aims to advance zero-carbon multifamily buildings in New York. This round provides financial awards and recognition for the design and construction of resilient, climate-friendly buildings that are healthier for residents.

This one-of-a-kind competition advances Governor Hochul's goal to achieve two million climate-friendly homes by 2030 and supports the State's nation-leading Climate Leadership and Community Protection Act goal to reduce greenhouse gas emissions 85 percent by 2050.

"New York is fully committed to fighting climate change on all fronts, and we are providing the necessary support to create energy-efficient multifamily homes through the continuation of the Buildings of Excellence Competition," Governor Hochul said. "This unique competition is driving real change within our buildings sector, creating low-carbon structures in communities across New York that will lead to a stronger and healthier state for all."

The Buildings of Excellence Competition is administered by the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority (NYSERDA), and with the latest announcement, proposals are being accepted for early-stage design projects from developers and their design teams that integrate carbon neutral features into pre-schematic and schematic design phases, and lead to the cost-effective construction and completion of exemplary multi-family buildings. In an expansion from previous years, Round Four of the competition will be open to applicants across New York State.

NYSERDA President and CEO Doreen M. Harris said, "Launching the fourth round of the Buildings of Excellence Competition demonstrates Governor Hochul's commitment to reducing our carbon footprint and ensuring our building stock is cleaner throughout New York. This significant investment creates healthier living spaces and communities for all New Yorkers, while driving down harmful emissions from buildings, which is one of our highest contributing sectors - and pushes us forward on our path to achieving two million climate friendly homes by 2030."

Senator Kevin Parker, Chair of the NYS Senate Energy and Telecommunications Committee, said, "We know buildings are the largest contributor to greenhouse gas emissions in New York State. NYSEERDA's Buildings of Excellence Competition is an example of how we can achieve our Climate Act goals through projects that reduce emissions in buildings while delivering benefits to New Yorkers living in affordable housing."

Homes and Community Renewal Commissioner RuthAnne Visnauskas said, "The Buildings of Excellence competition is a critical component of Governor Hochul's nation-leading goal to develop 2 million climate friendly homes by 2030. By incentivizing zero-carbon construction, especially in affordable multifamily buildings, we can provide healthier living spaces, reduce energy costs for low-income households, and ensure that our transition to a green economy benefits all New Yorkers equitably."

Proposals to the Competition's solicitation for demonstration projects will be accepted through Thursday, September 21, at 3 p.m. Applications to secure Early Design Support will be accepted continuously through June 28, 2024, at 3 p.m.

Launched in 2019, the Competition provides financial award and recognition for the design, construction, and operation of resilient, climate friendly buildings that offer predictable revenue and costs. With the support of industry experts, the Competition revolutionizes the new construction and adaptive reuse of multifamily housing and mixed-use buildings by demonstrating that they can be built cost-competitively as compared to traditional fossil-fuel dependent dwellings.

Additionally, the Competition prioritizes housing and energy affordability, supporting the Climate Act's goal to ensure that at least 35 percent, with a goal of 40 percent, of the benefits of clean energy investments support disadvantaged communities. 56 exemplary new construction and adaptive reuse projects were awarded in the first three rounds of the Competition - and more than two-thirds of these high-performing new construction buildings serve affordable housing markets with 30 being located in Disadvantaged Communities. Of those awarded, eight projects have completed construction and an additional 20 are currently in construction.

Buildings are one of the largest sources of greenhouse gas emissions in New York State, responsible for more than a third of annual emissions statewide. Integrating energy efficiency and electrification measures in new and existing buildings will reduce carbon pollution and help achieve modernized, healthy, and comfortable buildings. Through NYSEERDA and utility programs, over $6.8 billion is being invested to decarbonize buildings to achieve the State's goals, including NYSEERDA's more than $150 million investment in new construction, adaptive reuse, and gut rehab projects in the multifamily building sector for both market rate and low- to moderate-income properties.

Funding for this program is provided through the State's Regional Greenhouse Gas Initiative and $6 billion Clean Energy Fund.

New York State's Nation-Leading Climate Plan

New York State's nation-leading climate agenda calls for an orderly and just transition that creates family-sustaining jobs, continues to foster a green economy across all sectors and ensures that at least 35 percent, with a goal of 40 percent, of the benefits of clean energy investments are directed to disadvantaged communities. Guided by some of the nation's most aggressive climate and clean energy initiatives, New York is on a path to achieving a zero-emission electricity sector by 2040, including 70 percent renewable energy generation by 2030, and economy-wide carbon neutrality by mid-century. A cornerstone of this transition is New York's unprecedented clean energy investments, including more than $35 billion in 120 large-scale renewable and transmission projects across the state, $6.8 billion to reduce building emissions, $3.3 billion to scale up solar, more than $1 billion for clean transportation initiatives, and over $2 billion in NY Green Bank commitments. These and other investments are supporting more than 165,000 jobs in New York's clean energy sector in 2021 and over 3,000 percent growth in the distributed solar sector since 2011. To reduce greenhouse gas emissions and improve air quality, New York also adopted zero-emission vehicle regulations, including requiring all new passenger cars and trucks sold in the State be zero emission by 2035. Partnerships are continuing to advance New York's climate action with nearly 400 registered and 100 certified Climate Smart Communities, nearly 500 Clean Energy Communities, and the State's largest community air monitoring initiative in 10 disadvantaged communities across the state to help target air pollution and combat climate change.

Explore the garden, horticultural history at Mount Gulian Historic site

Mount Gulian Historic Site, Beacon, in cooperation with Dutchess Tourism, invites visitors to explore its garden and unique horticultural history on August 13. Special tours of the garden will be given at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m.

Visitors will learn about the garden's origins, evolution, and notable gardeners, including Mary Anna Verplanck, who as a precocious eleven-year-old, designed the original 1804 garden; James F. Brown, an enslaved man who fled Maryland and worked as Mount Gulian's master gardener; and Virginia Eliza Darby Verplanck whose literary contributions include two gardening books, Every Day in My Garden and A Year in My Garden from the early 20th century. Learn tips, tricks, and techniques from the past that kept boxwood gardens green and glorious.

Today, notable plantings in the garden include antique peonies, roses and yuccas that were returned to Mount Gulian in 1995 by a Verplanck descendant who removed them from the site in the 1960's.

After carefully tending to them for thirty years at her home's garden, she learned of our plans to restore the garden and happily brought them home.

Admission to this special tour is: $12 adults; $10 seniors; $6 youngsters (6-18 years). Children under 6 and Mount Gulian members are free. Membership is open to the public.

Reservations are preferred but walk-ins will be accepted if there are spots available. For reservations call 845-831-8172 or email at info@mountgulian.org. Payment may be made day of visit.

Cary Institute lead author studies road salt pollution in U.S. lakes

Lakes have been growing increasingly salty due to road de-icing, but a new analysis by lead author Chris Solomon from the Cary Institute of Ecosystems Studies in Millbrook suggests with careful action, concentrations may stabilize.

Since de-icing with road salt began in the 1930s, the salinity of lakes across much of the US has been steadily increasing, posing a potential threat to aquatic life and drinking water supplies. However, a cautiously optimistic new study in Limnology and Oceanography Letters concludes that if we can hold steady or decrease road salt use, levels in many lakes could stabilize below thresholds set by the US Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

"For the majority of U.S. lakes, road salt pollution could be a solvable problem, if we put our minds to it," said lead author Chris Solomon, who studies lake ecology at Cary Institute of Ecosystem Studies. However, he cautions that more research is needed to better understand what actually is a safe level of salt in a freshwater ecosystem.

The U.S. applies an estimated 24.5 million tons of road salt on its roads every winter — mostly in the form of sodium chloride. Rain and melting snow carry this salt into local waterways and aquifers, where it can cause freshwater salinization syndrome. Not only is this salt harmful to many organisms, but it can leach toxic metals and radioactive materials from soil and water pipes.

Solomon saw the upward-trending lines of salt concentrations in US lakes and wanted to find out where they were headed. Would road salt levels continue to rise, or would they stabilize? With colleagues, he developed a model to explore controls on road salt concentration in lakes to reveal the concentration at which they might level off.

The model looked at road density in lake watersheds, the amount of road salt applied per road mile, and precipitation. Hydrologic fluxes were taken into account to predict how salt pollution flows into and out of lakes. The model calculated the levels at which road salt would be expected to stabilize if salt application was held at amounts reported in 2010-2015, for all of the 461,000 lakes and reservoirs larger than 2.5 acres in the contiguous US.

For lakes in areas with light to moderate road density, the authors found that holding road salt application rates steady could help lakes stabilize below 230 mg/l of chloride per liter of water, the threshold designated by the EPA to protect aquatic life. Reducing application could yield additional environmental and economic benefits without threatening road safety.

The authors note that more research is needed to determine if the EPA's 230 mg/l chloride threshold is too high. Solomon explains, "The EPA's chronic toxicity thresholds for chloride were developed with limited data, and there is growing evidence that negative impacts can occur at concentrations well below 230 mg/l." Even less is known about how salt mixtures from multiple sources affect aquatic life.

Some places have set much lower chloride guidelines, including 150 mg/L in Michigan and 120 mg/L in Canada. The model predicts that chloride concentrations will eventually exceed the 120 mg/L threshold in more than 9,000 US lakes, even if road density and salt application rates stay at current levels.

Unsurprisingly, lakes with predicted salt concentrations in excess of EPA's 230 mg/l thresholds were most common in the Northeast and Midwest. Most vulnerable were lakes with high road density and high road salt application in their watersheds. They included some 9-10% of lakes in Illinois and Ohio, as well as a smaller percentage of lakes (<0.1 to 1%) in Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin.

Achieving safe salt levels in these lakes will require reductions in salt use. This can be done safely by adopting best management practices and new technologies.

As a test of the model's accuracy, predictions were compared to measurements taken at Mirror Lake in New Hampshire, a site that has been monitored since 1967 by Cary Institute founder Gene E. Likens. After plugging in the local data, the model predicted maximum and minimum salt levels, and the real-world measurements fell within the predicted range. "This gives us confidence that we're in the right ballpark," said Solomon.

"We don't think the model is perfect. It's a simple model that's meant as a tool for thinking through the problem," Solomon says. Among other things, the model ignores salt inputs from natural rock weathering and from human activities like agriculture and industry, and does not consider temporary seasonal spikes in chloride. "We hope others will elaborate on the approach and make better predictions. But in the meantime our results suggest that efforts to control salt application can make a big difference, and may help to prioritize those efforts," Solomon concludes.

Next steps include comparing the model's predictions to observed data in other places where salt application and lake chloride levels have been documented for many years, and using the model to explore how other forms of global change — such as land use or climate change — alter both precipitation and the need for road salt application.

Dutchess County Fair President/CEO Andy Imperati has announced that four youths have been awarded scholarships by the Dutchess County Agricultural Society (DCAS) Scholarship committee. These students are seeking higher education at accredited two- or four-year colleges or universities in the Fall of 2023.

The recipients were recognized on July 19, during the annual Agricultural Society's dinner meeting.

"In the past, the scholarship award was $8,000. It's been increased to $10,000. We continue to support our youth who choose to pursue a career in agriculture, or a career related to agriculture or horticulture," said Imperati.

Scholarship applicants were evaluated in a variety of areas, including Dutchess County Fair participation, grade point average, community involvement and leadership roles.

The scholarships are funded through the generosity of the DCAS, a 501c(3) non-profit organization.

Autumn Prezzano of Red Hook, was selected to receive the $10,000 scholarship, plus a one-time additional $7,500 award.

The following students were selected to receive a one-time Achievement Award: Lauryn Menz of Red Hook, Amanda Dillinger of Pine Plains and Brendan Scoralick of Poughquag.

The 177th annual Dutchess County Fair will be held Aug. 22 - 27 in Rhinebeck. For more information about this year's Fair, visit www.dutchessfair.com. Follow the Dutchess County Fair on Facebook and Twitter or call 845-876-4000.

Food pantry continues providing food at South Ave. location

The St. Andrew's - St. Luke's Food Pantry continues to provide food to the local community at its 15 South Ave. location in Beacon. The food pantry is open on Saturdays from 10 - 11 a.m.

The food pantry volunteers can serve between 20 and 29 families, stated volunteer Patricia Lassiter. On July 29, they served approximately 50 people.

Food is bought with money donated to the food pantry. Food from the food pantry also comes from the Food Bank of the Hudson Valley in Orange County, Common Ground Farm in Fishkill and local community groups.

Last month a judge ordered the City of Beacon to make parking spots available in the nearby parking lot for usage by the church and food pantry, as it was in previous years.

Donations may be made to St. Andrew's - St. Luke's Food Pantry, 15 South Ave., Beacon, NY 12508.
