SMALL BUSINESS SATURDAY

Farms diversify to survive and thrive

by Curtis Schmidt

The family farm – it's the epitome of a small business enterprise. For those who love what they do, it's an idyllic lifestyle.

You're the boss. You can work as much (or little) as you want, but you still have to make a living – pay the bills, balance costs vs. income, support the family, pay for the kids' education – and the list goes on.

And somewhere in the equation, items like creativity, changing with the times and building relationships all go a long way into developing the successful small farm.

To get a taste of how area farmers are surviving and thriving, we are speaking to a variety of individuals – Uplands Farm in Verbank/Millbrook with dairy cattle; Clover Brooke Farm in Hyde Park with llamas, alpacas, goats and sheep; Hardeman Orchards in Red Hook with apples and peaches; and Hudson Valley Flower Farm in Beekman with a wide variety of cut flowers for gifts and much more.

Surviving and thriving is all about diversification and exploring opportunities to add income in non-traditional ways. Current examples include: weddings and a music venue at Hardeman Orchards; and llama/alpaca hikes, goat and donkey walks, plus soap-making, beer brewing and felting/fiber arts classes at Clover Brooke Farm.

But success also comes from reaching beyond the Hudson Valley and setting yourself apart on the larger stage.

Mark Adams, President Emeritus of the Dutchess/Putnam/Westchester Farm Bureau said, "Local farms compete in a world marketplace. We pay about the same price for fertilizer, supplies, equipment and maybe energy as farms in other states."

"But labor is much more expensive in New York. Local farms have adapted by switching from labor-intensive crops like

CCEDC provides key resources to help agricultural community

Cornell Cooperative Extension Dutchess County (CCEDC) offers the local agricultural community the resources that are needed in order to survive, which are especially important during tough economic times.

"Much of what we do is through one-on-one conversations as each operation has specific needs and challenges," said Jennifer Fimbel, Dutchess County Agricultural Navigator.

She said the hot topics for 2022 were rising fertilizer costs, Highly Pathogenic Avian Influenza (HPAI), the lack of USDA slaughter facilities and start-up farms.

"I am asked at least twice a week about how a landowner can reduce their taxes through adding a farming venture or from new farmers looking to acquire farmland," she said. "CCEDC is part of the American Farmland Trust NY's Regional Navigator network. Through their website 'Farmland For A New Generation NY,' we are able to provide them with an entire network of farmers looking to farm. We also offer landowners information on how farm lease works here in the Hudson Valley, ventures that might work best on their soils and should they farm the land themselves or find a farmer to work the land independently."

Fimbel said (HPAI) or bird flu has been, and continues to be an issue in NYS.

"By keeping not only commercial poultry producers informed about preventing HPAI in their flocks, but also vegetables, to grain and hay, which are harvested by machine, plus beef cattle.

"We keep farming as long as we can make enough money to have a decent life - a home, food, a car, and maybe go to the movies once in a while."

World market place? Stephen Van Tassell, owner of Uplands Farm, noted, "We developed a cow family which we were able to market worldwide as a source of top genetics in the Holstein industry. The cow family ranked at the top of the breed for components, such as butterfat and protein, which is still a huge benefit in our current market, giving us a large advantage over the average milk price."

And now let's take a look at each farm, focusing on history, costs and income and the lure of farming.

Uplands Farm – Stephen Van Tassell

"Uplands farm was purchased in 1922 by my Great Grandfather, a New York City businessman with no farm knowledge or experience. He brought my adult grandfather here to help. My father Henry was born and farmed lifelong. The early days were a subsistence model that helped the family survive the Great Depression. Over the decades, dairy became the focus as it remains today.

"I was born with a consuming desire to continue the dairy farm. I had the opportunity to breed and manage the herd to my desire. I married Jill and we chose to work solely on the farm with no off-farm jobs or support to raise our family in what I still feel was an idyllic lifestyle.

"The economic conditions during that period changed dramatically, including dismal margins due to low milk price and an increased requirement for cash/income to cover real estate taxes that went from $800 annually in the 1970s to near $30,000 today. We also had a young and extended family to support.

"We have developed business relationships, which continue to help keep us viable. I consider myself one of the most fortunate people in the history of man. I wake every morning looking forward to the day ahead. I have never been hungry and I have been surrounded by some of the finest people around the world through a lifetime in the dairy business. Uplands Farm remains an important core to a diverse group of family and friends and I hope it lasts forever."

Clover Brooke Farm – Andrea Parent-Tibbetts

"As first-generation farmers, my husband and I started our farming journey in 2016 with much to learn about farming and long-term sustainability as our goal. Our first major project was rebuilding the century-old dairy farm that had not been managed for 30 years, prior to our purchase. Rebuilding infrastructure on the farm, clearing pastures, installing over 5,000 feet of fencing, repairing/rebuilding barns, building animal shelters and improving soil health for long-term grazing/crop production, while tackling most of the projects ourselves to save on outside labor costs, consumed all of our savings.

"We have learned that diversification is paramount to the survival of most businesses and farming is no different. We recognized we had to find ways to recover some of our costs to continue our projects that we had envisioned for the farm. We looked at ways to use the assets we had invested in (beautiful bucolic farm, friendly animals, past careers in education and finance) and decided to open our farm up to visitors.

"We jumped into social media at record speed, establishing our presence on an assortment of online platforms, networked to spread our name, collaborated with like-minded organizations, and developed a 'Virtual Farm Visit Experience' during COVID, which was picked up by national media."

"We raise llamas, alpacas, sheep and goats, producing luxurious yarns and other fiber products for sale. We also offer Llamaste Yoga and Lavender Loofahs and have partnered with Fearless Farmers, Inc. to offer Regenerative Farming classes for summer campers and elementary school groups. We welcome over 4,500 visitors a year to the farm who enjoy our many experiences, becoming an Agri-tourism destination for many looking to vacation in The Hudson Valley."

"Farm on!"

Hardeman Orchards – John Hardeman

"I grew up on the farm I currently operate. My father managed it until he retired and then I managed it until I bought my own orchard. In the late 1990s, with Scenic Hudson's pilot program to purchase development rights to protect farmland, I was able to buy this farm. "I operated both orchards, which were about 100 acres in production, and then sold the remote orchard to reduce the debt load and focus on the home orchards. Over time as the dynamic of the apple industry changed (a slump in apple prices, government regulations, loss of local support businesses) the larger orchards got bigger and smaller ones diversified or closed."

"I scaled back the orchard to retail and pick-your-own and started to make hay, grow some corn and lease out land to a neighbor to grow barley for the local malt/beer companies."

"I have recently started to use one of my barns as a seasonal music venue and for weddings as a way to supplement farm income."

"It has become more difficult to move a large amount of apples by retail. I rarely sell bushels, half bushels or even quarter bushels (the latter being about 12 lbs.) of apples as people don't cook and bake as much as they use to and tend to buy a few apples at the supermarket. Also, the fruit choices at big stores has increased (years ago it was apples, citrus and bananas) due to global trade."

"I never started farming to get rich, but more as a lifestyle. I enjoy the seasonal diversity, working outside, the connection to the environment, planting and nurturing crops to production and supplying food to people."

Hudson Valley Flower Farm – Shelley Wollert

Wollert visited a U-Pick cut flower farm with friends (and sisters) Christina and Clarice Jensen in September of 2021. They were all so moved by the experience, they decided to start their own business as a cut-flower growing collective, farming on their individual properties in Beekman, Beacon and Hillsdale and combining the fruits of their labor.

Wollert left her 10-year career as a technical project manager to spearhead the creation of Hudson Valley Flower Farm. While friends thought it was an unpredictable departure, Wollert's family has roots in farming all the way back to her grandmother in New Zealand, who was a "land girl" during WWII, growing local produce. Wollert also had a career as a children's music artist and actress, and brings her artistic sensibilities to her floral arrangements and handmade gifts.

"It's definitely been a challenge to balance investing in the farm vs. profits, especially since this was our first year and we had a lot of start-up costs. But I am optimistic that we have found an enthusiastic and appreciative market here in the Hudson Valley for local cut flowers that will continue to grow," said Wollert.

"This year was our first season at Hudson Valley Flower Farm, so we are learning a lot about growing in a sustainable way - making sure to nourish the soil and our pollinators to maintain a balanced ecosystem. In planning for next season, we looked at which varieties of flowers did particularly well for us and we are also appealing to buyers. We are focused on growing more of what works in order to make the most of what we can produce on our parcels."

Hudson Valley Flower Farm offers local, sustainable flowers and handmade gifts in custom arrangements for purchase, for special events large and small, and wholesale to premium local shops, florists, and businesses.

"Like so many people," said Wollert, "living through the pandemic has made me rethink just about everything. There was a reshuffling of priorities and a yearning more than ever to make beautiful things that spark human connection and happiness. Hudson Valley Flower Farm is that happy place for me."

County to host 6th Annual 'ThinkDIFFERENTLY' Conference

Dutchess County will host the sixth annual Collaboration of Services and Care Across the Life Span for People of All Abilities ThinkDIFFERENTLY conference on Dec. 2 at 9 a.m. The conference will be held in a hybrid format, both in person at The Henry A. Wallace Center at the FDR Presidential Library and Home located at 4079 Albany Post Road in Hyde Park and virtually on Microsoft Teams.

The event is for families and providers to discuss planning care for someone with intellectual and developmental disabilities. Registration is required and can be done at dutchessny.gov/tdconference.

County Executive Marc Molinaro said, "Dutchess County puts emphasis on supporting those of all abilities and our goal is helping families navigate through life and be aware of the many programs and services available to them. Bringing providers and families together is a great way to continue the conversation on best practices and decide where there may be room for improvement. As we launch the development of our All Abilities Action Plan, we are thrilled to host this collaborative event for those with disabilities and service providers."

Dutchess County's Director of Emergency Management Bill Beale will provide the keynote presentation, discussing emergency preparedness with a focus on those with disabilities. He will address families that may include a person with special needs and how they can prepare themselves to assist their loved ones during an emergency.

Throughout the afternoon, guest speakers will share insight and discuss resources and services valuable to residents of all abilities during different periods in their lives.

Presentation topics include:

- Early Intervention (EI) and Preschool: discuss processes and differences in evaluation from EI to Preschool for speech and other services.
- The IEP and 504: how to seamlessly navigate these processes and programs.
- Transition Planning: providing information on the support and services available during transitional periods for those ages 15-21.
- Adult Opportunities: providing opportunities for adults of all abilities such as the ThinkAHEAD college program through Dutchess Community College or employment opportunities in programs such as "Think Jobs."

The afternoon will conclude with an "open discussion" for parents, where they will have the opportunity to speak with other parents, ask questions, and gather information to better serve their family members with intellectual and developmental disabilities.

Dutchess County All-Abilities Director Dana Hopkins shared, "The annual ThinkDIFFERENTLY conference is a day that many in our community look forward to. Attendees can hear from and speak directly to the providers that serve their family members. I truly believe there is such value in that. Each year we have received positive feedback that attendees have left with a wealth of knowledge. On the other side, community providers, benefit from hearing from families and caretakers on current needs as it enables us to best serve our residents of all abilities."

Molinaro created the "ThinkDIFFERENTLY" initiative in 2015 as a way of fostering a more welcoming and inclusive community for individuals of all abilities. Since its inception, more than 100 municipalities throughout New York State and several others across the nation have followed Dutchess County's example and have passed ThinkDIFFERENTLY resolutions, committing to create a more inclusive and supportive environment for individuals of all abilities.

More information about Dutchess County's efforts to ThinkDIFFERENTLY, as well as ways communities can be more supportive of those of every ability, is available at thinkdifferently.net.

home flocks, we only had one case in Dutchess County," she said. "HPAI is a real threat to those who depend on poultry for eggs, meat and breeding stock. It isn't going away and we partner with our colleagues from around the state and NYS Agriculture and Markets for reporting and preventing HPAI in our domestic flocks."

Fertilizer costs were at an all-time high this past year and farmers were concerned how to best mitigate the risks of producing at higher costs or reducing yields on their products. "We discussed with individual farmers about the spring fertilizer costs, where costs might be cut and the ramifications on yields, giving them the tools they need to make decisions about their crops," said Fimbel.

The lack of local slaughter facilities has been a constant discussion, according to Fimbel. "We encouraged partnerships between farmers to ease travel time and keep the food system moving.

Slaughterhouses are not an easy sell in many parts of the county and finding labor is even more difficult. The pieces aren't all there, but we have been working on it."

She said CCEDC's partnership with Dutchess County for the Ag Navigator program has again offered the "Farming in Dutchess" virtual series. Topics have been of interest to a variety of people, including school districts, municipal officials, farmers and landowners.

"We also work with municipal officials when they have questions about what qualifies as agriculture, building permit fees, zoning and Agriculture Valued Assessment," said Fimbel. "Agriculture is not an easy business and we at CCEDC offer the resources to allow our farmers to make the decisions that best suit their operations."

County to participate in Thanksgiving STOP-DWI enforcement campaign

Dutchess County Executive Marc Molinaro announced police agencies throughout Dutchess County will participate in a special enforcement effort to crack down on impaired driving to coincide with the national Thanksgiving holiday. The statewide STOP-DWI High Visibility Enforcement Campaign effort starts on Wednesday, Nov. 23 and will end on Sunday, Nov. 27.

The Dutchess County Sheriff's Office, New York State Police and municipal law enforcement agencies will collaborate across the state and will be out in force in this coordinated effort to reduce the number of alcohol-related injuries and deaths during this period.

The Thanksgiving holiday period is among the most active on U.S. roadways, with the American Automobile Association estimating some 55 million motorists traveled for the holiday in 2019, the vast majority of whom drove to their destination. According to the National Safety Council, 29 percent of driving fatalities during the 2019 Thanksgiving holiday period involved an alcohol-impaired driver.

The Thanksgiving Engagement Campaign is one of many statewide enforcement initiatives promoted by the New York State STOP-DWI Association with additional funding from the STOP-DWI Foundation with a grant from the Governor's Traffic Safety Committee. The Statewide STOP-DWI Crackdown Campaign also targets Super Bowl Sunday, Memorial Day weekend, 4th of July, Labor Day weekend, Halloween and national Holiday Season in December.

While STOP-DWI efforts across New York have led to significant reductions in the numbers of alcohol- and drug-related fatalities, still too many lives are being lost because of crashes caused by drunk or impaired drivers. Highly visible, highly publicized efforts like the STOP-DWI Crackdown Campaign aim to further reduce the incidence of drunk and impaired driving. Residents can make a difference with a sober plan by downloading the "Have a Plan" mobile app at <https://www.stopdwi.org/mobileapp/>.

Free tax prep volunteers needed

In a renewal of its annual program, AARP Foundation Tax-Aide is working with the Hudson Valley CA$H Coalition to provide free-of-charge tax preparation services for residents of Dutchess, Orange, and Putnam counties who qualify. The program targets seniors and low-to-moderate income households, offering a seamless and free tax filing opportunity.

For the upcoming 2023 tax season, the Hudson Valley CA$H Coalition and AARP Foundation are seeking volunteers. Training will be held for new volunteers in the Fall for Dutchess and Putnam residents and in January for those in Orange County. If you are interested in additional information or participating, please contact Linda Eddy at leddy@dutchesscap.org or call 845-475-7500.

The Hudson Valley CA$H Coalition – a union of AARP Foundation Tax-Aide, Community Action Partnership for Dutchess County, and United Way of the Dutchess-Orange Region as well as an additional 13 other community partners – works to provide much-needed services to thousands of residents in the Mid-Hudson region. Last year, 4,218 residents were assisted through the program, with $4.2 million in tax refunds and credits going back to families and individuals throughout the community.

There are many volunteer opportunities available for a broad range of skills and interests. An extensive accounting or finance background – or even an interest in numbers – is not necessary to volunteer. The program targets seniors and low-to-moderate income households, offering a seamless and free tax filing opportunity.

All with computer knowledge and the genuine desire to help others are encouraged to sign up! Experience with filing your own taxes will be helpful. Tax volunteer classes will offer in-depth training and conclude with IRS certification after successful completion. Note: the Hudson Valley CA$H Coalition is in need of bilingual volunteers to better assist Spanish-speaking clientele.

For more information on becoming a volunteer, contact Linda Eddy (845-475-7500 or leddy@dutchesscap.org) for more information or go to www.hv-cash.org.

Astor Services seeks donations for 'Adopt-A-Family' program

With the holiday season upon us, Astor Services, a non-profit organization providing mental/behavioral health and educational services to thousands of children, adolescents, adults and their families throughout the Hudson Valley and the Bronx, is seeking monetary donations for its annual Adopt-A-Family program to help local families in need.

For more than 25 years, the Adopt-A-Family program has paired children enrolled in Astor programs and their families (18 and under) with donors who purchase gifts for them during the holidays.

During the pandemic, safety procedures and modifications were made to the program and the Adopt-A-Family program sought monetary donations to purchase gift cards. Cancelling this program was never an option, especially while families were struggling due to the pandemic. This year, like the last two years, instead of wrapped gifts, gift cards will be sent directly to the families of the children registered.

"A gift card is more than just a gift; it empowers families to choose what is right for them and their children," said Trish Luchnick, Director of Family Driven Care at Astor Services. "It strengthens a family's bond and offers hope during the holidays and beyond. Last year, through the generous donations received from individuals, local businesses, and foundations, Astor's Adopt-A-Family program provided gift cards to more than 1,900 children in the Hudson Valley and the Bronx. Gift cards enable families to experience joy as their children open a gift chosen personally for them."

Astor hopes that with the community's generosity, it will be able to provide some holiday joy to families in need. For more information about the program, or to sign up to donate, visit www.astor-services.org/adopt-a-family or contact Dana Valdez at dvaldez@astor-services.org.

DCHS exhibit of Caroline Clowes' animal paintings on display at Locust Grove

The Dutchess County Historical Society's (DCHS) latest flagship exhibit, "Fertile Ground: The Hudson Valley Animal Paintings of Caroline Clowes," is on display at the Locust Grove Estate in Poughkeepsie through the end of December.

Potentially one of the foremost female artists of her day, Caroline Clowes was lost to history until a chance re-discovery several years ago.

"This is a truly historic exhibition. It is the first such assembly of the paintings of Caroline Clowes, the nationally acclaimed 19th century LaGrange artist whose reputation had been allowed to fade. Visitors will not only enjoy her paintings, but learn about the story of a woman of talent and persistence who succeeded in a male-dominated field," said Bill Jeffway, DCHS executive director.

Center of attention

Let creativity be your guide when setting a festive holiday table.

Many of us are getting ready for the holidays and, for some, that means setting a festive table to welcome guests. Whether you plan to entertain with parties throughout the season or have family over for a traditional celebratory meal, your table is a great place to incorporate a feeling of welcome.

A common way to add a festive touch to your holiday table is with a centerpiece and candles, and flower arrangements are the perhaps the most common. And, while there's not a thing wrong with that, you may decide you want to try something different. Of course, the real star of the show should be the food you serve, which can be presented in ways to make it a centerpiece in its own right, but if you're looking for a little more, I've got some ideas.

Formal flower arrangements are lovely but can also be pricey and, at a time when our budgets might be limited, we might rather spend on the food and not flowers that won't last. You can still give your local florist business without breaking the bank and the result will be something of your own design that reflects your personality. Buy a few stems of cut flowers and greens, then add your own touches, which could be anything from fresh fruit and foraged greens to treasured trinkets you have around the house.

There's really no hard and fast rule here but there are a few things to keep in mind. Any arrangement in the center of the table should be low enough that people seated around it have an unobstructed view of everyone. Unlike the Vanderbilts and Astors, who were known to entertain with lavish and lofty arrangements, arbors and even vine-decked bird cages on their tables, we're trying to keep things more reasonable and practical. And, let's face it, as impressive as towering candelabra with rose garlands or a fully decorated Christmas tree as centerpieces would be, we might actually want to see and talk to those around us.

Also, if using candles, be mindful of their placement, especially if you're using candles you'll actually light. (Flameless, battery operated types don't pose as imminent a threat). Keep flames away from any dried flowers or anything that can get hot to the touch. You also want to be sure they're placed so no one has to reach over them for obvious reasons (yes, I've done it and singed myself passing the gravy!).

Another thing to consider when arranging – and this may seem obvious but in the throes of creativity it's easy to forget – is that food will actually need a place on the table, too. Be sure to leave comfortable space for serving dishes, plates and glasses. I say 'comfortable' because you'll want to be sure no one will feel crowded by your design or run the risk of knocking something over if they move or go to replace a serving dish.

I recently designed three centerpiece arrangements for Thanksgiving, with one easily adaptable for winter holidays, to illustrate how to put something together in very little time with little cost and still create warmth and welcome. I used a few purchased flowers and plants, but mostly used props I already had and went outside to forage in my yard and garden. You'd be surprised what you can find out there to use!

BOUNTIFUL

An arrangement in rich, fall colors that conveys the bountiful harvest we're all grateful for.

FROM THE STORE: apples, pears (golden Bosc and petite Seckel), grapes, mixed nuts, cranberries, acorn squash and persimmon

FROM YARD AND GARDEN: rhododendron leaves, dried hydrangeas, Japanese red maple leaves, azalea twigs (a delightful discovery with its tiny leaves in green and tinged red)

I displayed them in mismatched tarnished silver pieces of varying heights, presenting all those gorgeous fall colors in a rusticly elegant way that shows them off as the jewels they are.

SIMPLE SAGE AND ORANGE

Sometimes I like to limit the color palette. One of my favorites is the combination of terra cotta orange, sage green and ivory.

FROM THE STORE: small lavender tree, eucalyptus branches, sugar (pie) pumpkins, gourds

FROM YARD AND GARDEN: rosemary sprigs, sage sprigs

For this simple study of natural textures and colors that complement I placed the lavender plant in a wooden berry basket and tucked brown paper excelsior in around the dirt and to hide the pot. Everything is set directly on the table, arranged to maximize their different colors, heights and textures.

FORAGED GREENS

I like the formal simplicity of this one, which I think is at once classic and inviting. Although technically a Thanksgiving centerpiece, it can easily transition to the winter holidays with a quick swap of the amber votives for red, a more Christmasy linen tucked around the ferns and the addition of pine cones or holly.

FROM THE STORE: 2 potted Frosty Ferns (they look more like silvery-tipped tiny evergreens than ferns), eucalyptus branches

FROM YARD AND GARDEN: white pine, rosemary sprigs, rose hips

Clean and classic. The focal point is a small wooden box with two fern plants nestled inside, a fall plaid linen napkin tucking them in. I placed vintage saucers to either side, a pillar candle centered on each, laid a "wreath" of fresh rosemary around the pillars and encircled each saucer with sprigs of fresh evergreen, eucalyptus with its sage green "berries" and red rose hips. For a warm glow, votives with tea lights did the trick.

Of course, if your table size is limited or if you just want to forego a non-edible centerpiece, you can always dress up that turkey platter and call it a delicious day! Some fruit and fresh herbs placed around that grand bird makes it shine before your guests even taste it – it won't take much to make it even more impressive than it already is!

One last thing I forgot to mention: please don't think you have to entertain to decorate your table! Do it for yourself! It's a time to celebrate the season and when we create a festive atmosphere inside our homes it can make the holidays that much more heartfelt and special. When we surround ourselves with beauty, bounty and love, well, that's no small thing. It's worth celebrating and cause to be thankful indeed. Happy Thanksgiving!

A Tale of Two Senators

High hopes for Dutchess County's newly elected State Senators

Dutchess County will be represented in Albany by two new state senators on January 1, 2023.

Our District 41, which included almost all of Dutchess County except Pawling and Poughquag, has been restructured into districts 39, which includes Poughkeepsie and points south, and 41, with Millbrook and points north.

Farmers in Dutchess County have been working with our current state Senator Sue Serino to protect agricultural interests state-wide. I contacted both of our new senators to get a feel for how they might help New York farmers to stay competitive in the world marketplace, and how they can provide New York residents with fresh local food:

Rob Rolison, District 39 – I sat down with Senator-elect Rolison in his Poughkeepsie office. He has a long career in public service, from his days as a volunteer firefighter right after earning a criminal justice degree from Marist College, to his 26 years with the Town of Poughkeepsie police department (14 years as a detective), 12 years in the Dutchess County Legislature, including the chairmanship, and most recently as Mayor of the City of Poughkeepsie.

Roliso admits that his experience with agricultural issues is limited, but says he's "excited about knowing more about agriculture." As mayor, he "knows how important local food is," from working with food banks to helping with the Poughkeepsie Farmers Market at the Children's Museum.

Rolison is a Republican, and we all know how hard, if not impossible, it is for a Republican to get anything done in the Democrat-controlled legislature. Fortunately, the mayor and former chairman of the Dutchess County Legislature has a long history of working with a diverse group of colleagues, from "both sides of the aisle." He hopes to forge relationships with his can-do attitude.

I asked our senator-elect what committees he's likely to join in Albany. Drawing from his strengths, he mentioned the Local Government, Education, and Crime and Corrections Committees, but after some pleading, promised "the Agriculture Committee could be one of them."

Michelle Hinchey, District 41 – I could not get an interview with Senator Hinchey on such short notice. She is currently representing District 46, and is the chair of the State Senate Agriculture Committee. Hopefully she will continue in that role, so she can interact with our northern Dutchess County farmers.

Like her father before her, the late Congressman Maurice Hinchey, Senator Hinchey is a champion of the environment and working people. But it's no secret that some of the recently passed New York laws make it hard for our farmers to compete on the world stage – for example, the minimum wage and overtime laws, mandating overtime pay for farm workers after 40 hours per week.

In an interview with Hudson Valley One, Hinchey admits that "our farmers are struggling." So to keep them in business, she is offering tax credits and sponsored a bill, which passed the Senate, establishing procurement goals for New York State food products purchased by state agencies. She also sponsored (along with Didi Barrett in the Assembly) the Soil Health and Climate Resiliency Act, inspired by her alma mater, Cornell University. This will incentivize farmers to protect soil and sequester carbon.

Dutchess County farmers are looking forward to working with our new state senators to keep our farms growing and thriving.

Mark Adams is an agricultural advisor to the Dutchess County Executive, Congressman Sean Patrick Maloney, Dutchess County B.O.C.E.S. and Cornell University.

County Players to present Readers Theatre Dec. 2-4

County Players, one of the longest running community theatre companies in the area will present the Mini-Festival #2 in the CP2 Series Readers Theatre on December 2 and December 3 at County Players Falls Theatre, 2681 West Main, St. Wappingers Falls.

Reading #1- "George Washington's Teeth," by Mark St.Germain, directed by Michael J. Froehnhofer

The women of the beleaguered New Bunion Historical Society must find creative ways to lure visitors to their sleepy New England town. When a set of George Washington's dentures turns up in the hands of an unexpected rival, they brace themselves for all-out war.

This reading features local talent of Kaela Altman, Kim Barnett, Donna Conway, Chantez Engeleit, Steavie Hergenrader Reed, and Kevin McCarthy. Sr. George Washington's Teeth is presented by arrangement with Concord Theatricals on behalf of Samuel French, Inc.

Friday, Dec. 2 at 8 p.m., Saturday Dec. 3, at 2 p.m.

Reading #2- "Gently Down the Stream," by Martin Sherman, directed by Andrew Karl

Beau has spent his life trying to blend into a world that told him to be invisible. Rufus lives his life openly and becomes fascinated with the much older Beau. Falling into a whirlwind relationship, over a decade, they navigate a relationship neither expect, but on which both depend. This is a bittersweet, funny romance about being a gay man in the 21st century and finding love along the way. Includes local actors, Kory Geller, Joseph Jervais, Dylan Parkin, and Blake Pfeil. Gently Down The Stream is presented by arrangement Dramatists Play Service, Inc.

Saturday, Dec 3 at 8 p.m., Sunday Dec 4 at 2 p.m.

CP2 Readers Theatre is a series at County Players which offers an opportunity for actors, directors, and audience members to experience theater in a fresh way: selected plays with full dramatic readings, no costumes, no sets, no props, and the actors perform with scripts in hand. These shows are an incredible opportunity to experience great theater stripped to its essence: the playwright's words.

Sudoku requires no arithmetic skills.

The object of the game is to fill all the blank squares with the correct numbers.

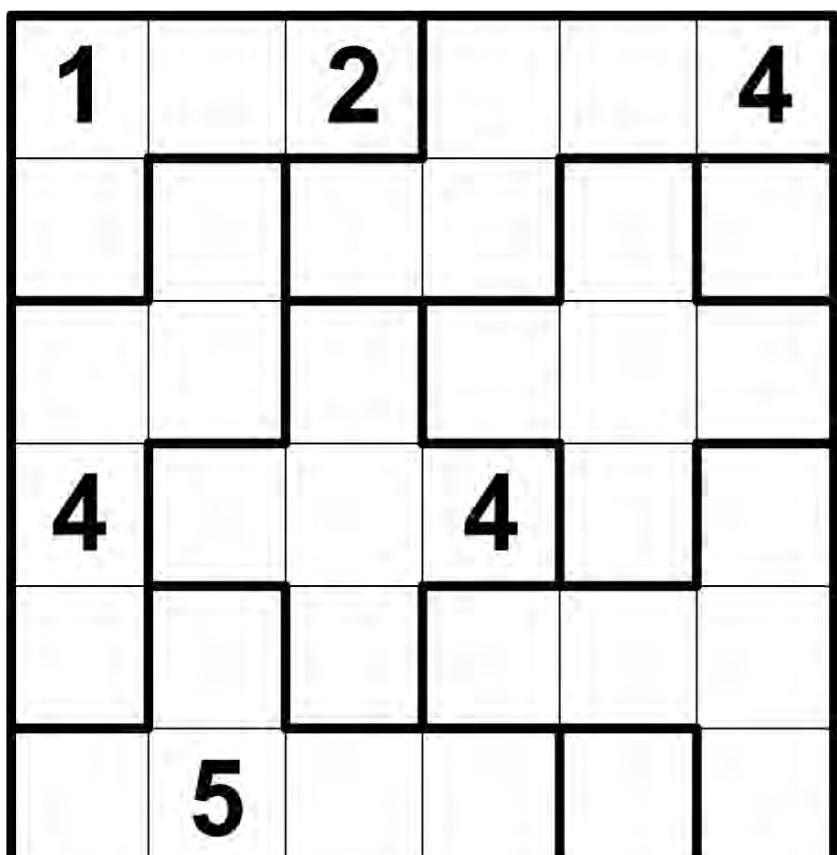

Each row of 9 numbers must include all digits 1 through 9 in any order.

The Fisher Center presents new interpretations of two holiday classics

The Fisher Center at Bard celebrates the holidays with two seasonal classics given fresh interpretations by world-renowned artists with deep connections to the College. Leon Botstein leads the Bard Conservatory Orchestra in a symphonic concert performance of Pyotr Tchaikovsky's The Nutcracker on December 3, and the Fisher Center presents the world premiere of SITI Company's reimaging of Charles Dickens' A Christmas Carol, co-directed by Anne Bogart '74 and Tony Award winner Darren L West.

The work, commissioned by the Fisher Center, is the final production in SITI Company's 30th anniversary "Finale Season," and runs for three performances, December 16-18.

In its special holiday performance on December 3, the 80-piece Bard Conservatory Orchestra, with a 24-member children's chorus, takes on Tchaikovsky's score for perhaps the most widely performed holiday classic, the two-act ballet The Nutcracker. The concert showcases the skill of the exceptional young players comprising the orchestra. It gives Fisher Center audiences a world-class rendering of the music, which Bard visiting associate professor of music Peter Laki, in a program note, contends is "the only thing critics liked about the piece from the start," and is "what has ensured The Nutcracker's place in the repertoire for 130 years, and is likely to keep it there."

After fruitful work-in-progress performances in December 2021, SITI Company returns to the Fisher Center to premiere a uniquely SITI A Christmas Carol. They conjure the ghosts of the past, present, and future to speak to our society's immediate need for gratitude, charity, fairness, justice, and equity.

Performance Schedule and Tickets

Bard Conservatory Orchestra, conducted by Leon Botstein, performs The Nutcracker on Saturday, December 3, at 8 pm EST, in the Fisher Center's Sosnoff Theater. In-person tickets are available for a suggested donation of $15–20, and livestream access is pay-what-you-wish.

Fisher Center presents SITI Company's A Christmas Carol Friday, December 16, at 8 pm; Saturday, December 17, at 6 pm; and Sunday, December 18, at 2 pm. Tickets are $25–65, with $5 tickets for Bard students made possible by the Passloff Pass and a 20% discount for groups of six or more.

Tickets for both events can be reserved at fishercenter.bard.edu, by phone at 845-758-7900 (Monday–Friday, 10 am–5 pm EST), or by email at boxoffice@bard.edu.

Bard Conservatory Orchestra

Bard College Conservatory of Music expands Bard's spirit of innovation in arts and education. The Conservatory, which opened in 2005, offers a five-year, double-degree program at the undergraduate level and, at the graduate level, programs in vocal arts, conducting, and instrumental performance, as well as Chinese music and culture. Also at the graduate level, the Conservatory offers an Advanced Performance Studies Program and a two-year Postgraduate Collaborative Piano Fellowship. The US-China Music Institute of the Bard College Conservatory of Music, established in 2017, offers a unique degree program in Chinese instruments. The Conservatory Orchestra has performed twice at Lincoln Center, and has completed three international concert tours to China, Hong Kong, and Taiwan; Russia and six cities in Central and Eastern Europe; and to three cities in Cuba. This year, the Conservatory has enrolled 176 undergraduate and graduate students from 20 different countries and 30 states.

COLLEGE NOTES

ONEONTA, NY -- Edward Sablinski of Pleasant Valley was recently recognized with a silver-level leadership milestone through SUNY Oneonta's LEAD (Leadership Education and Development) program.

Sablinski is studying Psychology at SUNY Oneonta.

Sablinski earned this distinction through a commitment to improving oneself and enhancing knowledge by exploring leadership opportunities, participating in campus organizations, and serving the campus community by taking on recognized leadership roles. Completion of this level requires attending nineteen events designated with a learning outcome (three must be diversity events), actively participating in four recognized organizations, completing three online courses (Foundations of Leadership, Personal Development, Organizational Development), and serving as an officer in a club or organization for at least two semesters (average of 219 hours to complete).

LEAD@Oneonta is a comprehensive leadership program based on current research and guidelines from the Council for the Advancement of Standards in Higher Education. All students can choose to participate in the LEAD program, which aims to better prepare them for life after college by providing a comprehensive picture of leadership and the skills needed to be a good leader.

Students can attain a silver, gold or platinum level. To attain each level, students must meet a mix of programmatic and experiential leadership requirements, including completion of online courses, attendance at educational events, and membership and leadership in one or more of SUNY Oneonta's 100+ student-run clubs and organizations.

Completion of a leadership level is recognized on campus as a credential that can be used, for example, when running for office or applying for STEP (Student Travel for Excellence Program) funding. The program also provides students with a leadership record that can be submitted to potential employers.

CANTON, NY -- Lifelong artist Mikayla Quinn, a member of St. Lawrence University's Class of 2024 whose hometown is Pine Plains, was drawn to an internship at the St. Lawrence County Arts Council, where she could use her talents to build community bonds while highlighting and celebrating North Country culture.

In the process, she confirmed her love for connecting with new people and was inspired to think deeper about what a career that combines art and her major, psychology, might look like. Mikayla's experience was made possible by the St. Lawrence University Public Interest Corp (SLUPIC) program, which provides funding and on-campus housing for students pursuing summer internships with local non-profits and organizations.

Quinn is a Psychology major, with a double minor in Public Health and Art and Art History

Note: some responses have been edited for length.

Why were you interested in interning with this particular North Country organization?

I have been an artist my entire life, so I felt like this internship was very much up my alley. Originally I applied to a different non-profit, but after my interview with the Arts Council, I felt a really strong connection with the goals of the non-profit as a whole and the position I was to fill.

What is an average day with the SLC Arts Council like for you?

I wear a lot of hats as an intern with this organization, which is what makes this placement so much fun for me. I usually come to work at 9 a.m. for our summer camp (of which I am the director). During the day, I might create TikTok and Instagram posts, work the register for the store, attend meetings with creative partners, help to plan new programs, teach classes, join painting circles with some of our partners, set up the gallery, and so much more. I also get to help run the open mics and sell my own work here, which is pretty cool!

How has this experience enriched or changed your understanding of the North Country?

While living on campus over the past several years, I believed that the North Country was a very conservative place, both in terms of politics and general social norms. I was initially nervous to be interning off-campus for the summer as someone who is queer-identifying. However, the work environment and even the general community here have given me a great sense of belonging. I feel like I always have a spot at the table and am a valued person in the store and outside of it.

What have you learned about yourself through this experience?

I already had a pretty good sense, but this experience confirmed that I am very much a people person. It brings me so much joy to help at events and have conversations with new people through my internship. It gives me a wonderful opportunity to extend my network.

How has this experience influenced your career path?

It has definitely made me think a little deeper about my career path. As a psychology major, I have always planned to become a licensed clinical mental health counselor, and this experience is not entirely related. Because I enjoyed my time here so much, I've been thinking more about the ways in which I could perhaps combine my degree in psychology and my passion for connecting with others through art.

What did you get to do while living on campus over the summer that you aren't usually able to do in the fall or spring?

Quite a bit actually! For one, I got to make amazing friendships with people who I ordinarily wouldn't see over the course of a regular semester due to conflicting academic schedules. I also had a lot of fun attending the food pantry and community dinners to further foster those connections. As someone on an accelerated path to graduation, I do not have a lot of free time during the semester. I've really enjoyed using my weekends off to go hiking, swimming, or traveling to Canada.

SUMTER, SC -- Central Carolina Technical College student Brian Bacomo of Rhinebeck was awarded a CCTC Foundation scholarship for academic year 2022-2023.

The CCTC Foundation awarded more than 70 scholarships at $80,000 to deserving students this year. These scholarships are made possible by generous donors who want to see local students succeed.

Blues legend Buddy Guy to play UPAC on 2023 farewell tour

Bardavon recently announced that pioneering bluesman Buddy Guy will perform at UPAC in Kingston on Thursday, June 15, 2023. Guy will be on his "Damn Right" Farewell Tour; the tour's title references his hit recording, "Damn Right I Got the Blues." The show will begin at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are on sale now and start at $54 (Members get $5 off).

Tickets available at Bardavon and UPAC box offices - Tuesday-Friday 11am-5pm. Bardavon 845-473-5288, UPAC 845-339-6088 or email at boxoffice@bardavon.org.

At age 86, Guy has been inducted into the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame, has influenced rock titans like Jimi Hendrix, Eric Clapton, Jimmy Page, Jeff Beck, Gary Clark Jr, John Mayer, Stevie Ray Vaughan, and just about every guitar player who has played the Blues, Blues Rock, and Hard Rock over the past 70 years.

He pioneered Chicago's fabled West Side sound and is still the living link to the city's halcyon days of Electric Blues, from the late 1950s when he was in Chess Records' House Band. It is the absolute truth to say that Buddy Guy is the last of the greats of the Blues performing today, who also brought the Electric Blues to the world, alongside Muddy Waters, BB King, John Lee Hooker, Albert King and many others from that time.

Guy has released a steady stream of albums since then and has received 8 GRAMMY Awards-winning his 8th and most recent GRAMMY Award in 2018 for his 18th solo LP, "The Blues Is Alive And Well," and the Lifetime Achievement GRAMMY Award in 2015.

He has received 38 Blues Music Awards—the most any artist has ever achieved, the Billboard Magazine Century Award for distinguished artistic achievement, a 'Kennedy Center Honor', and the Presidential National Medal of Arts. Plus, Rolling Stone Magazine has ranked him #23 in its "100 Greatest Guitarists of All Time."

In July of 2021, in honor of Buddy Guy's 85th birthday, PBS American Masters released "Buddy Guy: The Blues Chase The Blues Away," a new documentary following his rise from a childhood spent picking cotton in Louisiana to becoming one of the most influential guitar players of all time.

The documentary features new interviews with Buddy Guy, Carlos Santana, Eric Clapton, John Mayer, Gary Clark Jr, and more.

Though Buddy Guy will forever be associated with Chicago, his story actually begins in Louisiana. One of five children, he was born in 1936 to a sharecropper's family and raised on a plantation near the small town of Lettsworth, located some 140 miles northwest of New Orleans. Buddy was just 7 years old when he fashioned his first makeshift "guitar"—a two-string contraption attached to a piece of wood and secured with his mother's hairpins.

In 1957, he took his guitar to Chicago, where he would permanently alter the direction of the instrument, first on numerous sessions for Chess Records playing alongside Howlin' Wolf, Muddy Waters, and the rest of the label's legendary roster, and then on recordings of his own.

His incendiary style left its mark on guitarists from Jimmy Page to John Mayer. "He was for me what Elvis was probably like for other people," said Eric Clapton at Guy's Rock and Roll Hall of Fame induction in 2005. "My course was set, and he was my pilot."

Seven years later, July 2012 proved to be one of Buddy Guy's most remarkable years ever. He was awarded the 2012 Kennedy Center Honor for his lifetime contribution to American culture; earlier in the year, at a performance at the White House, he even persuaded President Obama to join him on a chorus of "Sweet Home Chicago." Also in 2012, he published his memoir, "When I Left Home."

These many years later, Buddy Guy remains a genuine American treasure and one of the final surviving connections to an historic era in the country's musical evolution.
